

Ex-RAF homes hit the market

FOUR former RAF family homes in Lincolnshire have been refurbished and put on the market. Once part of the family accommodation at the former RAF Kirton in Lindsey, which closed in 2014, the homes are priced from £120,000.

Released by private residential property owners, Annington, the properties are located on York Road which consist of two three-bedroom semi-detached houses and two four-bedroom detached houses. All the homes have garages, a private driveway and both front and rear gardens.

Natasha Hall, from the Scunthorpe branch of William H Brown, said: "These homes are in a sought-after and desirable location in a popular village. They are ready for families to move into, but they also provide a blank canvas and a superb opportunity to make additional changes and create a personalised family home."

York Road is in a rural environment, backing on to fields and close to the countryside, but with easy access to all the town's amenities. Local facilities include convenience stores, chemist, bakery, sweet shop and several hairdressers, a GP surgery, pubs and churches.

Louise Saunders, Sales and Marketing Manager at Annington, adds: "These homes offer a rare opportunity for families to secure a spacious home with a garage and generous garden at affordable prices. The town has everything needed for a growing family and we expect these properties to be extremely popular and would encourage buyers to book a viewing to ensure they don't miss out."
