Wiltshire primary school library given revamp after donation

A primary school library has been given a makeover thanks to a donation from a housing company.

All Saints C of E School in Netheravon received funding from Annington to give its library a fresh new look, creating a more welcoming space for pupils aged five to 11.

The money was used to purchase modern bookshelves, bean bags and furnishings to help promote a love of reading and support the school's goal of improving its learning environment.

Headteacher Rachael Banham said: "We like to bring small groups of students into the library to encourage them to find books they will enjoy and practice their reading skills.

"The generous contribution from Annington has brought our library back to life and will benefit generations of students, with a lasting impact on their education."

Stacy Whitehead, marketing manager at Annington, said: "It's fantastic to see the school's commitment to provide spaces that encourage pupils to develop their education and imagination outside of the classroom.

"We are dedicated to working closely with the Netheravon community and were excited by this opportunity to transform the library space for students.

"We hope it is enjoyed for years to come."
